We're sure that you are aware of the General Data Protection Regulations (GDPR) which come into force on 25 May.

We wanted to email everyone on our mailing list to give assurances that our use of your data is compliant with the Regulations, and to remind you of your rights.

We hope that you enjoy reading our quarterly newsletters. Our aim is to provide you with useful up-to-date news on employment legislation and best practice guides to employing and managing your staff.

Naturally we will use our newsletters to gently promote our products and services and occasionally the services of other businesses, but only where we feel they may be of interest and benefit to you and your businesses.

We are always keen to receive feedback about our newsletters, or to hear from you if you'd like us to cover a specific issue or topic on a future newsletter.

Please be assured that we only collect the relevant information from you that we need to be able to send you our newsletters, namely email address and your name. This information is stored securely in compliance with GDPR.

We will never share your data with a third party for marketing purposes unless you have given us your express consent to do so.
